

Introduction to Your Instructor

---

Hui-Jun Chen

January 12, 2022

The Ohio State University

My name is Hui-Jun Chen (Please call me Hui-Jun, or HJ if you cannot pronounce my name). I am a third-year PhD student studying Macroeconomics and International Economics.

My research interests lies on capital irreversibility and used capital market.

I use Linux system and love the open source community. I also host my own GitHub pages and creates some useful programs for my research, such as file manager and bibliography manager.

I am from New Taipei City, Taiwan.

Why Abbreviation?

To be specific, Why I allow you to call me HJ?

Basically Chinese is probably difficult for non-native speaker to pronounce.

Hui is pronounced like Hu-ei, the IPA is /huì/

Jun is pronounced like Ju-ng, the IPA is /jūn/

It's hard, and if Andrzej Skrzypacz, a professor in Stanford, gives up and allow English native speaker to call him Andy, I can give up too.
